

Water and Waste Water Treatment

If you are in the water or waste water treatment industry, G.C. Zarnas & Company understands your challenges. Corrosion, acids, chemicals, abrasion and immersion make for some of the toughest environments anywhere. Our knowledge and coatings application experience allow us to develop solutions to your specific problems.

Virtually every piece of equipment and every structure need protection. Zarnas has successfully applied corrosion-resistant exterior coatings and interior linings to structural steel, vessels, scrubbers, pipe, duct, valves, carbon filters, thickeners and clarifiers over the last five decades. Our industry leadership is the result of the full range of services and the high level of quality we provide to our customers.

Every day, your equipment is exposed to a corrosive environment. A little corrosion may not seem like much, but the results – inoperative equipment, increased downtime and loss of productivity – are expensive. The correct repair or replacement of damaged coatings and linings can dramatically increase the life of your company's investment and keep your long-term costs down.

A maintenance painting program must take into account the realities of an operating plant.

Zarnas takes into account the following:

- An awareness of maintenance painting and its relation to the efficient operation and profitability of the plant
- An understanding of coating specifications and application procedures
- Motivated and creative personnel for planning and implementation
- Establishment of priorities for areas to be inspected

Therefore, the key to preventative maintenance is to recognize that although coatings and linings may last for years, they will not last forever. Zarnas has National Association of Corrosion Engineers (NACE) trained staff to inspect your plant and equipment and make an evaluation of its condition. We meet schedules with quality, performance and service. The Society for Protective Coatings (SSPC) certifies Zarnas.

Whether you're concerned about lining new equipment or maintaining existing equipment, call Zarnas to address your corrosion issues. We deliver the ultimate in high-performance special coatings applications.
